Ripping Landscapes

Spring Newsletter 2016

Award?

I'm so excited – these two collages have been shortlisted for The Richard Watts Charity competition called 'Little Known Rochester and the surrounding area'. They are both of The Isle of Grain. The winner will be announced 7th April. Keep your fingers crossed for me.

Hot from the Easel

This is my latest piece 'Beating up Gravesend

Reach', based on a painting by local artist Norman Olley. It's a very new departure for me.

New venue

You can now view and buy my work from 'Made in Kent Gravesend' which is run by Mind. This is a wonderful new shop full of inspiring work from many artists, and in a good cause.

Learn how to do it – workshops

Ripping Landscapes workshops are proving very popular. They should be, because everyone is creative and collage is a medium which is so tangible and accessible. There are workshops on 9th April in Gravesend and on 14th and 15th May in Higham. Book early - £25 for a day.

Ripping Landscapes is moving forward at a pace!

That's all folks. I need to start a new collage but this time inspired from a trip to Goa a few weeks back. Watch this space.
